TO THE TIMES ONLY.

A Tie Vote in East Northumberland—Customs Order About Accepting Bribes.

An American Correspondent in Trouble—A Small Boy Goes Through a Bank.

[Special to THE TIMES.]

Regina, Oct. 16.—The slander case of Martin vs. Tinning ended last evening in a verdict for the defendant. The case grew out of the black balling of Martin by the board of trade at the instigation of Tinning, who accused him of having attempted to make an indecent assault on ten year old Grace Tinning. The verdict practically fastens this crime on Martin.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

Manager of B. N. A. Arrested—Division of Spoils Wanted.

[Special to THE TIMES.]

St. John, N. B., Oct. 16—W. E. Collier, manager of the Bank of B. N. A., was arrested here and charged with fraud, made by W. H. Harrison. The arrest grows out of the floating $150,000 bonds of the Northern and Western Railway. The profits on the transaction were seventeen per cent., which Collier kept. Harrison claims to have been a partner with Collier in the deal, but can't get any part of the profits.

FROM QUEBEC.

A Correspondent Arrested—A Small Boy Robs a Bank of $1000.

[Special to THE TIMES.]

Montreal, Oct. 16—On Friday, a correspondent of the New York Times sent it a dispatch charging Ald. Prefontaine with getting acting Mayor Clendenning drunk, so that he could not read the address to the Lieutenant-Governor, and Prefontaine might have that honor. The correspondent was arrested yesterday, charged with criminal libel.

A Small boy entered the Quebec bank yesterday afternoon, carrying an empty soap box. Up ending this next the counter, he clambered on top and reached over to the teller's desk, grabbed a package containing $1000 and fled. Mingling in the crowd on the street he was lost before he could be captured.

ONTARIO.

Tie in East Northumberland—A Customs Order—Accidents.

[Special to THE TIMES.]

Colborne, Oct. 16—The official returns of the East Northumberland election make the vote a tie. The returning officer's casting vote will give the seat to the Government candidate.

Lised, Oct. 15—Napoleon and Queen Bernier, of this place, went out in a small boat for a short trip on the 10th inst. Nothing has since been seen of them and it is supposed they are drowned.

Hamilton, Oct. 16—W. G. Server, G. T. yard master here, slipped while making a coupling yesterday and had both legs cut off. He will die.

Niagara Falls, Oct. 16—Fong Tang, a naturalized British subject, who has lived for years in Toronto and is married to a white wife, was refused entry into the United States at the suspension bridge yesterday. He was going to New York to join his father-in-law in the cigar business.

Ottawa, Oct. 16—The Minister of Customs has issued circulars warning all subordinates that any found accepting presents from importers will be dismissed. This is to check a growing practice.

Toronto, Oct. 16—Another case of smallpox was discovered here. The provincial board of health has been notified that Little Current, a village in Manitoulin Island, is infested with smallpox.

Owing to the widespread circulation of forged $5 bills on the Bank of B. N. A., this issue will be withdrawn from circulation and a new note will be issued.

Kingston, Oct. 16—In reply to the application of shippers to store grain in Ogdensburg elevators till the break in the Cornwall canal is repaired, the United States Government has given permission to store grain, duty free, at any American port on the St. Lawrence. The kindness is much appreciated.

WOMEN SMUGGLERS.

They are Interviewed in Seattle—Dreading Victoria Gossips.

Mrs. LeLevre and Mrs. Jelefs were interviewed by a Post-Intelligencer reporter on their way to the United States penitentiary at McNeil's Island. They both refused to make a statement when requested and then, womenlike, confided their whole story to the newspaper man's keeping.

"No," said Mrs. LeLevre, "we don't wish any more newspaper notoriety. We've had enough of that. Why, one reporter in referring to us said that I was probably 50 years of age. He might just as well have made me out 60.

"I must confess that you do not appear like professional law breakers," ventured the reporter.

"I should hope not, indeed," replied Mrs. LeLevre. "We're simply innocent tools of other persons, but I suppose we have got to stand the brunt of it, for those who are really guilty and who got us into trouble, have run away."

"You both live in Victoria?" asked the reporter.

"Yes, and everyone knows us there," said Mrs. LeLevre. "I have lived there for twelve years, ever since I was a little girl," interposed Mrs. Jelefs. "And I am a pioneer," added Mrs. LeLevre. "I have resided there twenty-three years and you don't know how I dread to go back. I suppose they will discuss it from all standpoints, but the old women are the worst. I suppose they will hold a tea party to talk it over, if they have not done so already. It will be pretty hard to go back and face it, but we know we are innocent and that will give us strength. The Americans have all treated us very grateful for it. They seem to be different from Victoria people. Over there they will hail our misfortune as a choice morsel for gossip, and here people seem to be sorry for us."

"Have you ever attempted anything of this kind before?" asked the reporter.

"No, indeed," replied Mrs. LeLevre. "I am almost a Victoria pioneer, having lived there so long, and had never been on the American side before. That was why we were so glad to accept the offer of our expenses and something over to make the trip. We thought we would have such a pleasant time and see all the places over here that we have heard so much about."

HOW IT OCCURRED.

"How did it come about that you undertook this job?" asked the reporter.

"Well, my son is in the liquor business in Victoria, and you know that men talk over all kinds of things in saloons. It came about in this way, that a proposition was made to us to bring this stuff over here on the terms stated, and we accepted for the reasons I mentioned. We knew that it was opium but did not know that it was unlawful to bring it into the country. We simply thought that we could have a nice trip by fulfilling this commission. We asked the man Hunter, who gave us the opium, how we had better carry it, and he said it would be most convenient to put it in our skirts; so each of us took 25 pounds and sewed it up in our skirts. Twenty-five pounds additional weight to your skirts is a pretty heavy load and after getting on the boat I told Mrs. Jelefs that I was not going to carry it in that way any more. I took my skirt off and threw in on the stateroom floor. If I had thought I was smuggling do you think I would have left the pesky stuff in such a conspicuous place? No, indeed. I think I would have hidden it away in the stateroom. Pretty soon the customs officer came in and picked up the skirt. He must have noticed its unusual weight, for he asked what it was. I told him he had better look and see. Then it flashed across me that something was wrong. He did look at the skirt and he found the opium.

"We telegraphed my son as soon as bail was fixed and he came over yesterday. He must have misunderstood the telegram, for he thought it was only $400 for both of us. When he found it was $400 each, he went back to Victoria to raise the balance. We expect that he will be back and give bail for us to-morrow and we will then be released and go back to Victoria. I think we ought to get free when we have a trial, but we consulted a lawyer and he said we would have to pay $150 bail or fine or whatever you call it, whether we were found guilty or not."

"Please don't say you found us in a cell," added Mrs. Jelefs. "The officials have been very considerate over here and we don't want the Victoria people to think we have actually been in jail, when we have not."

POLICE COURT.

(Before City Police Magistrate Richards, Q. C.)

The case of a hackman on remand, charged with vagrancy, was called this morning. Fined $5 and costs.

John Sevansky, charged by Officer Gaydon with driving over James Bay bridge at a pace faster than a walk. Fined $5.

Edward Hodges, charged with breaking away from an police officer.

J. W. Walker to Mr. Davie—When I went to arrest prisoner he ran up stairs and jumped through the window; there were two warrants; one was the original the other the copy.

His Honor—Would it not be better to hear evidence for the prosecution.

Mr. Davie—I thought the evidence for the prosecution was in.

Officer Walker was then interrogated by Supt. Bloomfield—I arrested E. Hodges on a warrant issued by T. Shotbolt on Jan. 30th. Thomas Robb arrested Hodges and handed him over to me; I brought him to gaol, by gaol I mean the city lock-up; handed him to Gaoler Hawton, who is keeper of the lock-up; left the warrant there; prisoner escaped from gaol.

Mr. Davie—Never mind about his escaping. That is what we are here to try.

His Honor to Mr. Davie—The case is in the hands of the prosecution, Mr. Davie.

Cross-examined by Mr. Davie—The warrants were signed by Mr. Shotbolt; I had no copy and Robb had no copy; I suppose Robb gave his warrant to prisoner. Warrant produced is mine.

To Supt. Bloomfield—I know Hodges was reading a paper in the jail and making light of it. I am sure it was one of the warrants. Cannot swear that Robb gave Hodges a copy of the document. I did not give him one.

John Hawton sworn and interrogated by Supt. Bloomfield:—I was keeper of the city lockup on Jan. 30th; Edward Hodges was brought in and claimed to be sick; asked to be let out to walk in the alley way; unlocked the door and let him out; he was sitting in the office when Constable Thomas brought in another prisoner; when he brought the other prisoner in witness did not lock the door outside; there is a bolt on the door and a spring lock; whilst searching the other prisoner Hodges rose up and went in the alley-way between the cells; was entering the charge against the prisoner arrested by Officer Thomas when I saw Hodges near the outside door; called to him to come back, when he gave the door a push and went out; he went through the fire engine house to the street; saw him running through the stable; the warrant I received from Officer Walker was my authority and I handed it over to the Supt. of Police; warrant produced was the one handed to the Superintendent; about a month ago I handed the warrant to Supt. Bloomfield; had the warrant in my possession when prisoner escaped; he was arrested before noon and escaped on the same day. Remember that prisoner burnt up a warrant, but don't know whether it was burnt on that day. To my knowledge he knew the charge he was locked up on.

To Mr. Davie—Prisoner said he was sick. He could not run like he did if he was sick. He would not run far if I had caught him.

Officer Walker, re-called—I laid the information; Mr. Shotbolt gave me two warrants.

After further evidence from officers Walker and Thomas, Hodges was committed for trial. Bail in the sum of $400 was accepted; $200 himself and two sureties of $100 each.

NEW WESTMINSTER.

Libel Suit Postponed—Dead Body—Firemen Resign.

[Special to THE TIMES.]

New Westminster, Oct. 16—The libel suit of Fagan vs. Cooper, which came up for hearing to-day before the Hon. Justice McCreight and a special jury, has been further adjourned till next Tuesday, owing to the absence of Mr. Taylor, counsel for the defence.

The chief engineer of the Hyack Fire company handed the resignation of that company to the city council last night. The resignation was accepted on condition that they continue duty till the end of the month. The engineer was instructed to take immediate steps to form a new company.

The remains of a human being were found in the bushes a little below the R. C. P. Mills this afternoon. The flesh was mostly decayed and the body cannot be identified.

THE WORLD AT LARGE.

How the Chinese Exclusion Act Operates—Can Whip England—Drowned.

Terrible Railway Accident—A Ship's Eventful Voyage—Lord Temple Dead.

San Francisco, Oct. 16—The British iron ship Childwall, Capt. Watson, has arrived in port after an eventful voyage of 229 days from Bombay. On the second day out, three stowaways were discovered among the cargo of steel rails. When ordered to come on deck they attacked the chief and second officer with crowbars and only submitted when fired upon by Captain Watson. In the next few days the captain found his crew very insolent. One man was placed in irons for bad conduct, and the remainder mutinied. They refused duty and the captain, officers, carpenter and the apprentice had to look out for and steer the ship. The crew still remaining insubordinate when somewhat near three months out the captain put in to Manilla, where a naval court found the crew guilty. They were taken to Hongkong where they were sentenced to various terms of imprisonment. A new crew was shipped and when they were eleven days out from Manilla a typhoon which lasted through the day was encountered. All poultry and live stock were drowned. A few days later another typhoon was experienced in which nearly every sail was washed away. When the Childwall came into port she had no sails on the foremast above the lower topsail. The rest were lost or rendered useless. She had no boats, all having been carried away. Six of the crew were laid up.

GREAT COAL SUIT SETTLED.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 16—A great coal land suit involving ten millions of dollars between Col. C. M. Derringer of Philadelphia, and ex-Senator Cove, of Drifton, which has been in litigation for 16 years, has been amicably settled in court. Derringer accepts half his original claim.

UPSET AND DROWNED.

San Francisco, Oct. 16—A sail boat occupied by three Presido soldiers capsized in the bay yesterday and one of them named George was drowned.

HOW IT WORKS.

St. Vincent, Minn., Oct. 16—Seven Chinamen, en route for China by way of San Francisco, arrived here yesterday. They had purchased tickets over the Canadian Pacific, but being warned by the collector of customs that if they crossed the border they would not be allowed to re-enter the United States, they negotiated the sale of their tickets and left last evening by an American route.

ON THE FIGHT.

Washington, Oct. 16—An interview with Secretary Whitney is published this morning in which he claims the United States has a ship-of-war. He does not expect war, but says her floating wealth is at her mercy now. The new swift cruisers could sweep seas while engineering science is easily competent to defend the seaboard cities against bombardment. Canada's military strength, he declares, is significant and England is incapable of aiding her.

ANOTHER TERRIBLE RAILWAY ACCIDENT.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 16—Another terrible accident on the Lehigh Valley Railroad occurred this morning. A construction train was unloading at Tamand siding on the Codville branch when the fast Pennsylvania freight train came along, dashign into the construction train. Of forty Hungarians at work, six were killed outright and twenty-six injured. A Pennsylvania train brakeman was killed and 27 cars were wrecked. It was three hours before help could be procured. Some were killed and others horribly mangled.

THE CABINET DIVIDED.

Madrid, October 16—The cabinet divided over the adoption anent the reform measures. A crisis is threatened.

DIED WITHOUT AN HEIR.

London Oct. 16—Lord Mount Temple is dead, aged 77. There being no heir the title becomes extinct.

RELEASED FROM JAIL.

Dublin Oct. 16—Father McFadden today was released from the Londenderry jail after serving six months for holding an unlawful meeting. Large crowds met McFadden and he was cheered. He said he was in good health and should continue to denounce the landlord's government.

MAJOR BARTELLOT'S MURDER.

Brussel's, Oct. 16—A courier of the Congo State arrived here with details of the killing of Major Bartellot. It appears that the murder was committed by one of Bartellot's porters, who shot his master with a revolver in revenge for either fancied or ill treatment. The porter was at once arrested and has since been hanged.

"LONG JOHN" DEAD.

Chicago, Oct. 16—Hon John Wentworth, better known as "Long John," died this morning aged 73. He leaves an estate valued at $1,000,000. He was formerly mayor and congressman and editor.

AN OLD STORY.

Bridgeport, Conn., October 12.—A sensational rumor is afloat that Philip Palledoni, hanged here last Friday, is still living. It is said that when he dressed for execution a leather harness was placed beneath his clothes and a small steel hook attached near the neck, and that on the scaffold the noose was passed under the hook. It was said that Palledoni was buried within an hour after the execution, but it is now reported that he is alive and secreted by friends.

THE INTERDICTED CHINEE.

A Supposed Scheme to Enter Uncle Sam's Dominions.

San Francisco, Oct. 16—It is learned to-day that Chinese have placed $2,600 on the steamer Duke of Westminster, which sailed for Hongkong via Vancouver yesterday with over 200 returned Chinese. This money is to be used to land 200 of them at Vancouver at the $50 tax per head. They then expect to be smuggled across into the United States.

Victoria Theater.

Dan Sully, with his world-renowned play, "Daddy Nolan," will appear at the Victoria Theater on Friday next. On Saturday afternoon "The Corner Grocery" will be given. "Vacation" and "Daddy's Trust," a double play, will be given Saturday night. Mr. Sully is a favorite in this city.

OKANAGAN MISSION.

Personal Items—Social Events—Artesian Wells—Dull Times, etc.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Mr. Geo. Whelan, one of our "rustlers," is away on a visit to relatives and friends in England. Geo. is a traveler, having been in Australia, New Zealand and across our continent.

Mr. Duncan Cameron, bartender at the Victoria Hotel, Vernon, was married to Miss Annie Christian, daughter of Joseph Christian of this place, on the 6th inst., at the R. C. Church. Every success to them.

A new dam is being put in Mission Creek to divert the water into the proper channel. The work is progressing favorably under the able management of Mr. L. Falconer.

Mr. E. Lequime and A. B. Knox have been seriously ill with mountain fever, but are recovering. Mr. Knox has left for Kamloops for medical treatment. Our climate is so healthy that we very seldom see a doctor. Possibly we are healthier without a resident physician, for one gets accustomed to using simple remedies or doing without medicine altogether. There is a heap of common sense in the old couplet:

"Joy and temperance and repose,
Slam the door on the doctor's nose."

We hear very little about the government putting in artesian wells, except that Mr. McKay, C. E., has been sinking one for several months on the ranch of Mr. Martin, M. P. P. at Grand Prairie. Americans advertise machinery for sinking these wells at the rate of from twenty to thirty feet per diem. There must be a screw loose somewhere. The estimated depth of these wells throughout the valley calculated upon by Mr. McKay is 200 feet.

The social event of the season takes place at Vernon on the 11th and 12th. There are to be races of different kinds during the day and in the evening tripping the light fantastic toe until the wee sma' hours will be indulged in. No doubt matrimony will receive a fillip by the gathering together of so many young people.

Times are pretty dull at present, and to make matters worse the price of drinks has been raised to two bits. This scarcity of money is owing to there being no sale for wheat. The purchase of the Enderby Mill by Welch, Rithet & Co. will be a good thing for this locality, as no doubt they will provide a way for shipping next year's crop. A good many cattle have been sold to Mr. Greaves, of Nicola, and several carloads of horses have been shipped to New Westminster. It becomes the ranchers here to study the situation. A little headwork with the physical labor is better than all the elbow grease with no system. They can solve the difficulty and have fuller pockets at the end of the year. One thing that has not been attempted yet is fattening cattle in the winter. I have no doubt good beeves would bring high prices in Kamloops or Victoria in early spring. This piece of advice is given gratis. There are many other things in the shape of advice that practice would be equally profitable.

SPORTING NOTES.

Football Challenge—Athletic Exercise—U. S. Lacrosse Championship.

John L. Sullivan has accepted the position of sporting editor of the New York Illustrated News.

LACROSSE.

The lacrosse match for the United States championship and the Oelrich cup, between the Staten Island Athletic club and the Brooklyn Lacrosse club, was won by the latter, after a desperate struggle.

BICYCLE CHAMPIONSHIP.

The second bicycle race of three trials for the world's championship at one mile was won at Hartford, Conn., on Wednesday last by Rowe. Time, 3.34½.

FOOTBALL.

The New Westminster Football club have challenged the Victoria club for a match to be played in the Royal City. The home club wishes to play on Beacon Hill and negotiations are going on on the subject.

ATHLETIC EXERCISES.

The gymnasium of the B. C. Garrison Artillery will be opened for the season this evening. Members of the brigade have the use of the rooms and apparatus on payment of a nominal fee.

ENGLAND'S NEXT REPRESENTATIVE.

The prospects are that next season will see another comer from across the ocean in American waters to offer battle for the America's cup. The new comer will probably be Mr. Paul A. Ralli's new cutter, Yarana, a vessel designed by G. L. Watson, the designer of the famous Thistle and the almost equally well known Irex.

AQUATIC.

The Boston Herald says a match has been arranged by Hanlan between Teemer and Kemp. Hanlan's ambition now is to bring the cup back to America.

A LARGE SEIZURE.

Six Canoes of Smuggling Indians Brought Into the Harbor.

Six canoes of west coast Indians, which were returning from the hop fields of Puget Sound, were intercepted at the mouth of the harbor this morning and brought into the landing below the custom house. A reporter visited that vicinity this afternoon and found the customs officials busily engaged in examining the contents of the canoes. About sixty siwashes and klootchmen were on board and each seemed to have invested their spare cash pretty thoroughly in tilax in Uncle Sam's markets. There were barrels of sugar, abundance of flour, cooking stoves, calicoes to no end, blankets, boots and shoes, suits of men's clothing, shawls and skirts of dazzling colors, apples, tea and coffee, and what seemed to be the best investment of all—plenty of soap.

In fact they had a complete outfit for housekeeping and full supplies for winter. The klootchmen were very much exercised over losing their calicos. "Na na," but didn't they use the eloquence of their sex on the sub-collector. As the work of examining their trunks progressed they did not appear to be much contented over the matter, but will probably feel worse when they come to pay some $70 in the way of duties. The customs officers deserve credit for making the capture.

—The estate of the late Louis M. Starr comes up in the Superior Court in Oakland, California, this week for final settlement and distribution, at which time it is expected that the illegitimate son of the deceased, born of Bridget Gallagher, of Portland, Or., will make known his claim to the property.

LIQUOR LICENSE.

At the last Board of Trade meeting the liquor license system was brought forward for discussion by the President. The various restrictive licensing acts of other provinces of the Dominion were considered, when the several points submitted by the Council for consideration by the Board were laid over till the next quarterly meeting. This subject has occupied the attention of the Legislature for several sessions. Last session the Hon. John Robson introduced a measure as a private member which was properly ruled out of order on the ground that legislation ought to originate with the Government. Of course this apostle of temperance knew before he introduced the bill that such would be its fate. However, it answered as a peg to hang his hat on at the W. C. T. U. the other day. Had the Provincial Secretary been earnest and honest in his intention, and considered the question of vital importance, why did he not insist on having it introduced as a Government measure or at once resign from the cabinet. Any recommendations emanating from the Board of Trade on this important subject will, of course, receive attention and consideration from the Legislature. The question is, we know, a difficult one to handle, and the liquor interest, or a goodly portion of it, will possibly oppose any limitation of the number of licenses, or any increase in the price paid for the privilege of selling. That is natural and to be expected. Vested interest will also be advanced, and with much force, against restrictions which up to the present have not been deemed necessary, but the dealers will, sooner or later, have to face the problem of an amendment to the license law; and they will, we think, best study their own interests by acquiescing in amendments which would not involve very radical changes or impose any undue hardships upon the trade. It is a somewhat unusual proceeding that legislation affecting the liquor trade should be originated by a commercial instead of a temperance organization; and it is at the same time significant.

CHINA MAIL SUBSIDY.

The Dominion Government having granted an annual subsidy to the China mail service of $45,000, in addition to that of the Imperial Government, it were well in the future interest of Victoria that the promise of Hon. Mackenzie Bowell should be kept before the people. At the Board of Trade meeting, the Hon. gentleman, when questioned about the calling of the China mail steamers at Victoria, said that the Government could do nothing in the matter at present, but that if the Government granted a subsidy they could by right interfere. The Hon. Minister spoke as the mouthpiece of the Cabinet, and the people of Victoria must insist on its fulfillment. Promises are often given lightly, and Dominion Cabinet Ministers when starring it through the country, often make rash promises which they endeavor subsequently to evade. They are also much given to saying, "Oh! I know it is a grievance and should be altered, but recollect I am only one." It is of vital importance to the future commercial advantages of Victoria that the China mail steamers should call at this port. It remains to be seen what the action of the Dominion Government will be when the time arrives. We have some eighteen months to look forward to, and the present Parliament will by that time be almost moribund. Promises will be doled out plentifully and the consummation left over to suit the whims of ministers, in order to gain a political advantage. In the long run, "the power behind the throne may be greater than the throne itself," and Victoria and her interests may again become the victim of political exigency. In the meantime the people should become alive to their interests, and unite regardless of party to stay forever their being made the shuttlecock of a party determined to steal away, bit by bit, the rights and claims to which we are justly entitled.

OUR OTTAWA LETTER.

The Haldimand Election Trial—A Point Raised—Unrestricted Reciprocity.

Will John A. Veto the Jesuit Bill—The Senate and B. C. Members—Lord Stanley.

From Our Own Correspondent.]

Ottawa, Oct. 8—The Haldimand Dominion election case came up in the Supreme Court last week and lasted some three days. It was an appeal from the trial of Judge Street, who dismissed the petition against the return of Dr. Montague. In addition to the usual charges made in election protest cases, one of a new and important character was brought up in court. It was thus: Since the adoption of the Dominion Franchise there has been no annual revision of the lists. In the last contest in Haldimand a large number of parties on the lists as "farmers' sons," "owners' sons"—and rightly put on at the time—became disqualified between the time of registration and the election, owing to their fathers having died or in some other way their qualification having ceased. When some of these disqualified persons appeared at the polls they were asked to take the oath that they were "farmers sons" "or owners sons" "residing with their fathers," etc. In one particular instance a man named Nixon, whose father was dead over two years, refused to take the oath, but was ultimately induced to do so by an agent of Dr. Montague's, who assured him it was all right. This is claimed by the petitioner to be a corrupt practice. But what I want to point out in this case is that owing to the non-revision of the Dominion list thousands of good votes have been disfranchised. Nixon had a better qualification, having become owner of his father's property, but he had no vote if challenged, or took a false oath to obtain one. It appears to me that when the court comes to a decision in the case it will either void the election or permit the taking of further evidence which was refused by Judge Street. The latter at the trial would not permit the examination of witnesses to show that they were aliens, personators and others unqualified to vote, as he maintained it would destroy the secrecy of the ballot. In other words Judge Street considered that conducting an election by fraud was a small matter as compared to divulging how a man votes. If the Supreme Court endorses his opinion, purity in elections is a good way off, and penitentiary birds will be fitting applicants for the position of retiring officers.

UNRESTRICTED RECIPROCITY.

The Liberal party are claiming a victory for unrestricted reciprocity in Cardwell, where the majority of Mr. R. S. White was only a little over a hundred, while that of his father at the general election was over 400. In my opinion it was one of the things that had perhaps least to do with reducing the Tory majority. Cardwell is outrageously Tory, but after being subjected for many years to accept the wishes of the Premier as who should or who should not represent them in the Federal Parliament, they are now beginning to show signs of rebelling against their representative being selected from outside the constituency, and particularly from the province of Quebec. The head centre of Orangeism is a bad field for the growth of unrestricted reciprocity, but when it is claimed that the new trade policy is finding converts in Cardwell its progress in other localities will be rapid. Mr. Wallace looks after the constituency until the election, and again secure an independent Liberal support, he will be able to defeat the editor of the Montreal Gazette. The feeling I have already mentioned is only growing but by then it will be ripe.

THE JESUITS BILL.

Sir John Macdonald and his colleagues are at the present moment in as great a dilemma as to the action they will take in regard to the Jesuit Bill, passed by the Quebec Legislature, and granting some $400,000 to the Jesuits for the confiscation of their property, as ever they were in respect to the Orange Incorporation Bill. For some time past the Government have been receiving strongly expressed resolutions calling on them to veto the measure in question. A regular storm is now raging in the province of Quebec against the Federal authorities for having vetoed the District Magistrate's court bill and now threaten to wipe out of existence the Debt Conversion bill, and to add the vetoing of the Jesuits bill would be almost political annihilation to followers of the Government among the French Canadians. It has Mr. Chapleau's support, and by the grace of the Secretary of State the present administration alone exists. On the other hand the Premier has declared that the Federal Government is responsible for the laws passed by the provinces, in so far as he has taken the right to himself to veto laws of a purely provincial character, and if he does not exercise the use of power in this instance he will be held responsible of having sanctioned the enactment. Orange incorporation was killed by the members of the order within their own lodge rooms, and with the pistol, held by the order of the leaders, at his head, honest John White, ex-M. P., demanded a vote in the House of Commons. "Better that it should be defeated than the Conservative party injured," was the expression of one prominent in the order when the vote was cast and from that day to this the Government has not lost any support from that quarter. But French Canadians when they know that they are able of themselves to turn out, the Government will not brook any such insult, and therefore the astute Premier is most likely to allow things to remain as they are, be the legislation in question good or bad.

THE SENATE.

Mr. James Reid, M. P., of Cariboo, who has been called to the Senate, is in every way as well qualified to take a place in the antiquular chamber as any among the British Columbia representatives. I do not speak in a disparaging sense, as far as Mr. Reid is concerned, although his acceptance of the position places him in a political mortuary, wherein the subservient followers of the Premier are now ending the latter part of their days. While Mr. Reid was one of the most unassuming members of the Pacific slope, he took equally as much interest in the affairs of the Province as any of the others. I never looked on him as one who would use his public position to advance his personal interests, and certainly I was not erring in my conclusions. Mr. Reid is too good for the old ladies chamber, and he has my condolence. In the meantime there are seven vacancies. But there is none in British Columbia, and Mr. Crow Baker, M. P., will have to wait. The Senate is the very place for Mr. Baker. He would not have to ask for an adjournment to attend balls at Rideau Hall, nor would he require to become conversant with the rules of the Chamber so as not to repeat the mistake he made in the Commons of moving the adjournment of a debate when the speaker left the chair at six o'clock with the idea of having something to say on it when the Speaker returned at eight. To his astonishment the subject under discussion was put to the foot of the order paper and Mr. Baker was not allowed the opportunity of speaking on it until a week or so later. This would be excusable in a new member from the rural districts, but for an urbane gentleman like Mr. Baker there was no excuse. By all means let Mr. Baker have a place in the Senate.

BRITISH COLUMBIA TIMBER TRADE.

Senator Ross, the millionaire lumberman who died at Quebec the other day, had made every arrangement for opening up a new branch of his business at Westminster, B. C., taking into partnership with him Mr. James McLaren, of Buckingham. Mr. R. Nagle, of Ottawa, was also to have an interest in the business besides the active management. Whether the death of the Senator will interfere with this or not I cannot say.

OUR NEW GOVERNOR.

Lord Stanley, of Preston, our new Governor-General, who has taken up his winter quarters at Rideau Hall, is making hostes of friends. Last Friday and Saturday evening he attended the Opera House to hear the Lotus Glee Club, of Boston, who appeared under their Excellencies patronage, the proceeds being towards the monument for the Ottawa sharpshooters, Osgoode and Rogers, killed in the rebellion at Cut Knife. A very handsome sum was realized. With the near approach of winter, Government House, and the series of festivities enjoyed there, will be the attraction for those moving in society circles at the capital. The leading lumbermen and prominent merchants are not to be found there. The well-to-do business men of the town "keep a window" and are therefore disqualified. In brief, the majority of local callers at Rideau Hall are from the civil service. Mr. Kimber, the usher of the Black Rod, who draws a handsome salary for two days' work in the year, usually instructs his Excellency's aides as to who shall or who shall not attend dinners, balls, &c. Ottawa's Division Court has a pretty good acquaintance with many of the "dude's" who claim the right of visiting Rideau Hall and excluding the leading men of the city.

—Furred Tongue and Impure Breath are two concomitants of biliousness remedied by Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. Heartburn, which harasses the dyspeptic after meals, and all the perplexing and changeful symptoms of established indigestion, are dispersed by this salutary corrective tonic and celebrated blood purifier. *

—Mr. R. A. Harrison, Chemist and Druggist, Dunnville, Ont., writes: "I can with confidence recommend Northrop & Lyman's Vetetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure for Dyspepsia, Impure Blood, Pimples on the Face, Biliousness, and Constipation—such cases having come under my personal observation." *

—Those intolerably painful and constantly harassing things called piles, which trouble so many people, are soon healed by Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil—the great external remedy for physical suffering and means for relieving pains. A very small quantity achieves results of the most gratifying kind. *

—C. C. Jacobs, Buffalo, an employee of the U. S. Express Co., says: Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil cured him of a bad case of Piles of 8 years standing, having tried almost every known remedy, "besides two Buffalo physicians," without relief; but the Oil cured him; he thinks it cannot be recommended too highly. *

A Warning.

The modes of death's approach are various, and statistics show conclusively that more persons die from diseases of the throat and lungs than any other. It is probable that everyone, without exception, receives vast numbers of tubercle germs into the system and when these germs fall upon suitable soil they start into life and develop, at first slowly and is shown by a slight tickling sensation in the throat and if allowed to continue their ravages they extend to the head, causing catarrh. Now all this is dangerous and if allowed to proceed will in time cause death. At the onset you must set with promptness; allowing a cold to go without attention is dangerous and may lose you your life. As soon as you feel that something is wrong with your throat, lungs or nostrils, obtain a bottle of Boschee's German Syrup. It will give you immediate relief. *

The Right Time.

Probably there is no period in life more important for the mental and moral training of youths than that between eight and seventeen years of age. If the spring-time of life is well employed, good results may be expected in after years. No better preparation can be afforded boys in this province than that which may be obtained at Corrig School, which is already largely patronized, and which a weekly increasing in number

CHAPTER XVIII.

Robert lingered on. He said he was studying American character. So he was.

He mingled freely in the green tea and lemonade dissipations of the country side. He partook of the mild refreshments and amusements that were the proper thing. At all these scenes of strictly moral gayety he was the hero. He carried off the honors in a lazy, half cynical way that made him the adored of young ladies, the envied of young men. Everywhere he wore the same air of holding himself a little apart from the rest, of being absent minded and slightly bored. This air succeeded to a charm. It is to be recommended to young men and maidens seeking to make an impression.

At an autumn picnic in the woods he seemed more than usually indifferent. He leaned idly against a tree with his feet crossed, his head thrown back, his eyes gazing widely off into the nowhere. It made not a bad picture, the tall figure there against the tree, in the midst of the blazing gold and crimson woodlands.

"Thinking on your sins?" asked Brownie. "You ought to be."

"No," says he, "I'm thinking on other people's sins."

"Whose, may I ask?"

"Yours."

"I have no sins to be forgiven. At any rate, if I have, I will bring you a sin offering which will atone for all the crimes I ever did or ever shall commit, past or future. I bring you a cut of southern fried chicken and a Yankee doughnut."

"I fear the Greeks bringing gifts," said the young man, rather stupidly.

"But I'm not at all dangerous," answered Brownie, quite as stupidly.

"There you are mistaken. You are the most dangerous person I know. And wicked! You will never get forgiveness unless you come with me down this path over the hill, and confess your sins in private, one by one."

"Yes, I know," said she gayly. "You want to take me out there in the woods and murder me, and hide my dead body for the birds to cone and cover me up with leaves."

"You're rather large for a babe in the woods, I'm afraid. And nothing like innocent enough."

The path led away from the rest of the party, out of sight.

"Isn't it something new for you to wear rings?" asked Brownie. She was sure he had not had that one on when the party started.

"Well, y-e-e-s. This is too small for me, however," taking it off. "It was made for slenderer fingers than mine. Don't you think it is rather a quaint bit of workmanship?" said he, carelessly.

"Yes, but very pretty. I never saw a ring like it before, just a plain circle of turquoise forget-me-nots, with pearl hearts. It's old, is'nt it?"

"Yes, older than I am. It's an heirloom in our family, and——"

The laziness and indifference suddenly died out of his manner. His voice was earnest enough then, and trembling and passionate, as he said:

"I had it from my mother. She told me never to part with it till I placed it upon my wife's finger. My mother is dead. Will you wear it?"

"WILL YOU WEAR IT?"

* * * * * *

So it was over. But hidden from them by a clump of undergrowth, a man was watching them. He made no sound, but his face, his very figure was so distorted with rage and passion and hate, that he looked a wild beast instead of a man. It was Rip the Tramp.

* * * * * *

"I reckon life'll be all peaches and cream for Brownie now," remarked Mrs. Simpkin's. Life was very bright and sweet to Brownie then. A bird sang in her heart all day long and softly trilled a whispered music in her dreams by night. When did ever maiden have a more royal lover, or more devoted, in his way!

They were to be married at Christmas. The elder Mr. Edgerly wrote, hastening the wedding. He wanted Robert's American girl over there in his English home, he wrote. Brownie was to leave her native shores a bride.

That was all very well so far. But Brownie was a teasing, tantalizing sprite still. Sure of her tall adorer, she could not help experimenting on him. There were little tiffs now and then that were quite something else than the merry sparring of the days of their first acquaintance.

"I'm going to leave you for a week, Brownie," he told her one day early in December. "But I shall be back a week from to-day."

A gay party of young people was made up for the evening that Robert was to come back. Brownie was asked to join them, and consented. She thought she would like to see what Robert would say.

She found out.

He came in the evening. Brownie was dressed charmingly in cream color and scarlet, all ready for the party. She looked an enchanting little witch. Robert's eye outlined her admiringly, from head to foot.

"I'm awfully sorry," said the little hypocrite, "but some people made me promise to go out with them to-night. They just made me go, whether I would or not."

"Ah!" remarked the Englishman, indifferently. "Well, that will do. I had some letters to answer to-night, and I shall have time to write them now."

He went away with a languid adieu. Brownie frowned with vexation. That was not just the kind of scene she had expected. Shirley laughed.

"He knows how to manage you, doesn't he, Brownie? I've no fears for your happiness now!"

If Robert had left well enough alone, it would have been well enough. But he did not do that. He was put out by Brownie's behavior and he could not hide it entirely. He went a little way toward the village and then turned upon his heel and came back.

"I forgot," said he, "I brought out a new book for Shirley. I want to see what she says of it. You don't care for such things anyway. I think I'll stay and read it to Shirley this evening while you are gone."

"So glad to see you!" Brownie murmured sarcastically.

He drew out his book and unwrapped it lazily, commenting the while on its lofty intellectual character.

"By the way, Brownie," he asked, "where is it you are going to-night?"

"I don't believe I'll tell you. My amusements are not sufficiently intellectual to interest you."

"Oh, well," said he, "it's of no consequence."

Brownie was provoked. "I'll make him angry, or die in the attempt," she vowed to herself.

"Wherever it is," she said, "I'm to meet a most fascinating young man. He's a man who appreciates my meanest mental graces, too, if some other people don't. He has the most perfect manner to ladies I ever saw. He isn't one of your intellectual slouches who never see whether a lady is comfortable or not."

Robert looked from his book.

"Is it young Martin, may I ask?"

"Oh, then, there is something you are interested in?"

"Because if it's young Martin, he's a person whose charming devotion is no credit to any lady. Seriously, I shouldn't like to have him hanging about you, Brownie."

"Oh, thank you. But I think I can tell who's proper to hang about me. I'm old enough, too, goodness knows."

"Oh, come now, Brownie, that's nonsense. Really, is it Martin you mean?"

"Really, I won't tell you."

"Won't?"

"By the blessed broomstick, no!"

He was getting a little vexed. Brownie watched the knitting brows and exulted. He meditated a moment. "But I insist on knowing."

"Oh, you do. How very unfortunate."

"If you don't tell me this," he said, "I shall think you would be capable of keeping things from me in earnest."

Brownie flashed a smile at him from her dancing brown eyes, her white teeth and scarlet lips.

"Trust me all, or trust me not at all," she murmured.

"Perhaps," he said, "you'd like it to be not at all?"

"My other adorer would like it, anyway."

"Because," he continued, "it can be managed well enough. Had Bryson and his wife and sister start for the Sandwich Islands from California in two weeks. They'll be over there in the Pacific a year or two. They are my best friends. I belong to their party properly, but I've been wasting my time here. They've complained before that I deserted them. Now they write asking me for the last time to join them."

"How touching!"

"I ought to have gone to them long ago. If I do so now, you won't object, I suppose."

"Not I!"

It was the mere ragged end of a cob web for them to quarrel about, yet they quarreled.

"Very well, then, since it makes no difference to you, I've made up my mind to go."

"Oh, by all means."

"Then I must start at once. I shall bid you good-by to-night."

"So we shall not have the honor of seeing you at—Christmas, I suppose?"

He answered slowly and quite seriously: "I—have other views."

Brownie turned white. But it was only a moment. Then the little reprobate balanced herself on one foot, gave him a saucy glance out of the side of her eye, and whistled—actually whistled——

"Good-by, Brownie."

"Good night, Mr. Edgerly."

She went with her friends, and they danced on into the small hours, and Brownie was the merriest of them all. She felt worried privately about the quarrel, yet she was sure he would come back next morning.

But Robert Edgerly did not come back. If he had waited till morning he would have come. He would not have had the heart to do what he did. But he was angry. A train left Linwood in two hours. It connected with the midnight western express at Chesterton. When Brownie came home and went sleepily upstairs next morning he was already 100 miles away. He had a temper, when it was up.

Brownie came down from her late sleep at noon, weary, pale and a little cross.

"I didn't like to disturb you before," said Shirley, "but here's a note Robert sent me. You will know what it means, I suppose."

It was a brief note of farewell. He had started for the Pacific, he wrote. The journey was an unexpected one and he was sorry to leave, but Brownie could explain matters.

So he was gone!

Brownie read the letter again and again, to make sure she understood. When at last she could not help knowing the truth she leaned her head upon Shirley's faithful shoulder, and cried to break her heart.

"I never thought he'd go. I never thought it," she sobbed. "I only teased him for the fun of it."

The trouble was not any easier for her to bear, either, as the days went on and the tall lover did not come back. She clung for long against reason to the hope that his heart would fail at the last, and he would yet return before the vessel sailed.

Christmas came and went. Christmas was to have been her wedding day. The winter lengthened into spring, still no word from the missing one. Then Brownie gave up looking for him.

So it was not to be all peaches and cream for her. She still wore his ring, the quaint circlet of turquoise and forget-me-not he had placed on her finger that day in the autumn woods. She did not know where to send it to him. Not a word had come.

She waited awhile and then railed, this inconsistent young lady did, bitterly against the falseness, the heartlessness of the masculine sex. She carried it off bravely enough among her young friends. It was easy to say that they had quarreled and he had gone off in a huff and wasn't coming back. She meant to do as she liked, sweetheart or no sweetheart, and gentlemen who didn't approve her ways needn't, that was all.

But she fretted secretly, nevertheless, and pined visibly. She had been more in earnest in caring for Robert Edgerly than in anything in her butterfly life before. With Shirley she broke down and did not deny that she was fretting her life out. Shirley made no solemn face over the matter. Shirley laughed at her and rallied her to keep up her spirits.

"Really, do you think he will ever come back, Shirley?" she asked her sister.

"Can't say, probably not. But don't worry about it. Get another lover. That's the best way for a young lady to cure a broken heart. You've plenty of admirers, I'm sure."

"But they are all such stupids after him."

"You ought to have considered that before you teased him so."

"But I never thought he would go off in earnest. They always do come back. They seem to like it. He's the first man I ever saw that I couldn't manage as I pleased."

"You are getting knowledge of the world, then, Brownie—increasing your stock of experience. You are getting your eyes opened."

"I don't want them opened. It isn't the fair thing for such trouble to happen to me," said this spoiled child.

"It's what we all come to," answered Shirley, with sudden gravity.

It was true that Brownie had many admirers. She had not the sister's marvelous beauty, the splendid face that, once seen, men and women turn to look at again; that, once seen, remained a picture in memory to eternity. But Brownie had the prettiness that attracted common men far oftener. On the whole, it suited her better, too.

Adorers buzzed about her in numbers after Edgerly had departed. Undoubtedly she would have consoled herself in time. It may or may not be anything against her in the estimation of ladies readers to tell that on her. Nevertheless, truth is mighty. The truth will weigh nothing against her with the gentle masculine reader—we know that.

As it was, however, Brownie refused to be comforted for a whole twelvemonth. That was a long time.

Shirley's tender, watchful soul was troubled about her sister. She tried in all loving, lively ways to change her thought. She filled in the evenings with gay company and kept the girl out in the sunshine by day. She invented errands for her here and there.

So the summer wore on into the fall, quite a year since Robert had rushed off in a huff. It was indeed a year to a day. That very day Shirley sent Brownie to old Mme. Frenchy's cottage across the woodlands.

Brownie had a great fancy for jewels and bright bits of color about her. It was a long inheritance from red blooded ancestry. She was fond of rings, and wore half a dozen sometimes. Again she was bracelets like an Indian princess and necklaced to match. With all these, too, such a vivid, flashing, quick moving creature was Brownie, she did not look overdone.

This afternoon it suited her fancy to rig herself out in heathen splendor. Besides rings, bracelets and neck pin, she wore the pretty watch and chain Shirley had given her at her eighteenth birthday. She had on a crimson dress. What with her bright dress, the shining bits of gold and stone about her, and the sunshine glancing on and off her as she moved along the woodland path, she looked like a red bird flashing among the trees.

"Be sure and get back before dark," said Shirley.

The path led near the very tree under which Robert had stood that day a year ago, in the blazing glory of the falling leaves. Could she help lingering under the tree and sighing as she thought of the sweet might have been? Could she help, indeed, wandering on beyond the hill to the exact spot where the lost lover had placed his mother's ring upon her finger and asked her to wear it always? The ring was there still. The turquoise trifle itself thrilled with an electric wave of recollection till she felt its pressure on her finger. She could have cried as she thought of it. Too bad, too bad it was!

A wild man started up before her. He was hungry, he was mad with rage against the world. He was wicked. He was fit for deeds of terror. There was a Lucifer like grace and comeliness about him, too, as he flung himself across the way with his swinging arms and gleaming eyes. He stood in front of the girl. His glance roved over her in silence. Her heart beat heavy and fast. Her striking, fantastic prettiness, the jewels about her, aroused the evil in the man yet more.

He was a tall, powerful man. She was wholly at his mercy.

"How do you do, Rip!" said she faintly. His eyes glowed with devilish glee.

"How do I do? You're interested in my health? It's good, thank you, and all the better of seeing you. You've snubbed me all your life, Miss, and now I can take my pay, right here. Hand over that there blue ring."

"HAND OVER THAT RING."

She hesitated and drew back.

"May be you'd like me to help you? Kin I be of any assistance to you, Miss?" said he in a mimicking voice, with a diabolical grin.

He threw his arm about her. His dirty tattered sleeve chafed her delicate neck. She was enraged, and exclaimed:

"How dare you?"

He gave a short laugh.

"Dare! Come, that's good. Dare! Is there anything a man will do or can do, that I wouldn't dare? Do I look like that?"

Brownie was a plucky creature for all. In her fierce anger at him for touching her, she forgot her prudence. She struck him in the face with all her might. One of the rings upon her hand cut his lip till the blood flowed. It enraged him and yet amused him.

"Come, hand it over," said he. "I'll help you. Live or die, I want it."

He stripped it off her finger. Then she made as if to go. He seized her arm again.

"Not so fast, my red bird. I want to look at you close to. How would you like to be married to me, Miss?"

She shuddered and he laughed.

"Ef I had my rights, I'd be a gentleman, and as good as you. Ef I'd had the raisin' I'd 'a been the biggest nob of 'em all! Whose wife would you 'a been then? Miss Brownie—you'd 'a been my wife!"

She shuddered again.

"I see; you'd sooner touch a dead cat nor me. I most wish I could kill you. I'd do it with a good will, if I could."

She gave a scream of terror.

"Never fear, my red bird," said Rip. "I'm not going to. I was going to. But I can't. You've got enough gold and swag about you to keep a poor man like me a year. I meant to take that, too. But I can't touch it. I don't know why I don't, but I don't. Only this ring the Englishman put on your finger. That you'll never see again."

He stopped and struck his heel into the earth, enraged. Then he seemed to cool down again.

"No, Miss Brownie, I can't hurt you, and you may thank your stars for it. You go free for all me. But some time, when you are rich and happy and married to the Englishman, curse him!—I say think of this day in the woods. Remember that Rip, the tramp, might have robbed you, might have murdered you and worse, but did not. Why? Because, Miss Brownie, he loved you, loved you even better than the Englishman did."

To be continued.

THE OTTER.

Breaking the Steamer up—A Long and Useful Life.

Ships, like men, are bound to decay, and when the world has no more use for their services they are cast aside as worn out and useless. Old ships are mostly like played out politicians, who, except they perform some great action sink lower and lower in the ladder of life till they drop off altogether. Some ships, like the "Victory," retain their existence and are preserved as monuments of valiant deeds; other war ships lose their identity altogether, and are consigned to the ignomy of trade. It is so with the old Otter, once the pride and glory of the western shores. She now lies at Spratt's wharf, being dismantled and cleared of her engines, in order to fit her for her future walk in life, that of a dignified coal barge. The Otter was built by the celebrated firm of Green & Co., at Millwall, London in 1852, for the Hudson Bay Company, and was launched in the same year. Of the auxiliary screw propeller class, bark rigged, her engines were manufactured by Morsley & Co., the celebrated engine builders. They were exhibited in the first great London exhibition in 1851. At the time they were considered the acme of perfection in marine engines. The Otter sailed from London in the latter part of 1852, arriving here early in the summer of 1853. She was for years employed along this coast in the trade of the H. B. Co., and for many years was the only "fast and commodious" steamer between the island and mainland. She has had an eventful history, and columns might be written descriptive of her life and adventures. The C. P. N. Co. purchased her with other vessels when that company was organized about five years ago. In her time she was a moddle of naval architecture, being built on lines now fast disappearing before the less beautiful of the iron age. Her absence from the coasting trade will create a void noticeable to all old timers. Capt. Lewis came out as chief mate of the Otter in 1853. Thus the old land marks pass one by one out of sight and out of mind.

SOUTHFIELD MINE

The Fire Still Burning, but Decreasing—No Gas.

Nanaimo, Oct. 16—The fire is burning still, but not so briskly as yesterday. Men can get around the fire on all sides. Water from the steam fire engines is still being forced down the slope and playing on the fire. Relays of about two dozen men are constantly at work at the fire. The fan is still detached and there are no signs of gas in the mine yet.

The British Columbia Directory.

A new directory is now being compiled for the province of British Columbia. It will contain full descriptions and reliable information of the various places, besides an accurate list of the residents, &c., a personal canvass having been made by Thomas Draper. Owing to the large increase in the province, the volume will be at least double the thickness of previous years. R. T. Williams, Publisher, 28 Broad street.

Mr. Benj. Suite, who occupies a position in the Militia Department, Ottawa, writes that the day is coming when the present inhabitants of Ontario will be replaced entirely by French Canadians. Relying on what he has witnessed during the past 30 years and what is going on to-day, he gives to the Legislative Assembly in Toronto ten or twelve members in 1915. During the 30 years which follow, the Province will be carried by the French Canadian element, and it will then be a second Quebec.

Change of Time Table.

It is reported that the C. P. R. is contemplating a sweeping change of time table on the main line. The train which now reaches Vancouver in the morning will arrive at night.

Saanich Show.

On Thursday next the North and South Saanich Agricultural Society will hold their twentieth annual exhibition at their grounds, South Saanich. During the evening the annual ball will take place in the spacious hall. Visitors from this city will be courteously received by the committee of management, and the good people of Saanich. A string band under the leadership of Prof. Boernstein will furnish music.

Sent Back to China.

A San Francisco despatch of yesterday says: Two more steamers with Chinese arrived from Hongkong this morning, the Pacific Mail steamer City of Pekin, with 124 and the Canadian Pacific liner Parthia with 111. The Duke of Westminster, of the latter line, has sailed for Hongkong, carrying back 230 of the 236 Chinese, which she brought here a week ago to-day. The other six landed on writs of habeas corpus. They claimed to be natives of this country.

Train Derailed.

A rock slide of about 50 tons took place to-day at the first cutting south of Niagara Canon on the E. & N. R., a short time after the track walker had passed down. The southward bound train struck the slide, derailing and slightly damaging the engine. The cars remained on the track. There were no passengers or train men injured. A number of men went to the scene on a hand-car and it was expected would soon have the engine again on the rails.

Marine Notes.

The Olympian will go on the dry dock at Esquimalt before the T. J. Potter, and not, as at first reported, after it. The dry dock will not, however, be ready to receive either steamer before December.

There was absolutely no truth or foundation for the rumor that it had been decided to put the Olympian on the Columbia river in place of the Alaskan since that steamer had broken her walking beam.

The steamer service from San Francisco to Portland has been increased by the addition of the George W. Elder, so that there are now four vessels on the line. Steamers will depart this month every four days instead of weekly. Capt. Ackley has been appointed master of the State of California and Capt. Angerstein of the Elder.

The Russian steamer Alexander II. arrived in San Francisco on Saturday last. Capt. Greenberg reports the seizure of the British schooner Aurana for illegal sealing by a Russian war vessel. The captured schooner and her cargo were taken to Vladivastock, where the case will be investigated.

LIQUOR LICENSES.

The Board of Trade Takes the Question Up.

At the quarterly meeting of the Board of Trade, the President, R. Ward, reported that the question of liquor licenses had been under discussion by the council, and that he had been requested to bring the matter before the board. There was, he thought, room for amendment in the existing system, which is practically unrestrictive. Although the Crooks Act worked well in Ontario, where the licensing system was carried out by three independent and unpaid commissioners, the act was perhaps too elaborate for B. C. The course adopted in Nova Scotia, in respect to the principle of petitioning, was directly opposite to that in Ontario, the latter being in favor of the former against the issuance of licenses, and it is said that the Nova Scotia system works better than the Ontario. The following points were submitted for consideration: 1. Definition of licenses—Wholesale. Retail—i. e., hotels, saloons, taverns, bottle or grocers' licenses. 2. Limitation of numbers. 3. Independent licensing authority. 4. High license. 5. Define whether licenses or the owner of building occupied by him is entitled in perpetuity to a license. 6. Disqualifications of an applicant to acquire a license by transfer when said applicant has been refused a direct application for a license. After a long discussion the subject was on motion laid over until next quarterly meeting.

PERSONAL.

Items Telling of the Movements of Well Known Persons.

S Richards, Esq, and Mrs Richards are at Roccabella.

Wm Dalby left this morning for Harrison Hot Springs, where he will remain a week or two, and possibly afterwards extend his trip to Winnipeg and Ontario. Mr D has been unwell for several weeks and hopes after a holiday to return fully restored.

Dr Bourinot, clerk of the House of Commons, has returned to Ottawa greatly invigorated by his trip to the Pacific coast. During the next few weeks he will be engaged on an elaborate treatise showing the workings of our political system in Canada, to be published in the series of political studies of Johns Hopkin's university, under the title of "The Federal Experiment in Canada."

O E Winslow, a young gentleman from England, arrived here yesterday to assist Mr. Moody in his evangelizing work. Mr Winslow is a son of the well-known Dr Winslow, author of books on Christian experience and other religious works. He had been engaged in travelling for some time until he met Mr. Moody in San Francisco, when he decided to accompany him and to share in his labors.

MOODY'S MEETINGS.

An Epitome of the Sermon on Being Born Again.

The weather not being so propitious as on former evenings, the crowd assembled at the rink last evening was not as large as previously. In spite of the steady down-pour of rain, the number of eager listeners anxious to hear Mr. Moody was somewhere about 1500. The several clergymen of the Ministerial Association occupied seats on the platform. The singing by the choir, under the direction of Mr. Brown, was fully up to previous efforts. The Rev. Mr. McLeod, previous to the opening of the meeting, addressed a few remarks to the people bearing on the financial part of the undertaking. He said he had been accused of saying that the collection was the best part of the meetings. He never said so. What he said was that the collections were necessary, as all honest people wished to pay their debts. All collections would be fully accounted for to the public. The Association had incurred a large debt in fitting up the building, for rent, light and other expenses. The fitting up of the building alone had cost $500. When that was paid there wouldn't be much left out of the collections. Mr. Moody did not reap any pecuniary benefit by coming here as a man had told him (Mr. McLeod) down town to-day. He received nothing nor had he asked for anything (applause). The collection was a very important part of the proceedings and would now be taken up.

Mr. Moody came on the platform punctually at 8 o'clock, and gave out the hymn "Blessed Assurance," which was rendered in grand style by the choir, the vast congregation joining heartily. The Rev. Dr. Reid offered up a prayer, and the spirited hymn, "When the Mists Have Rolled Away," was sung. A prayer by the Rev. Mr. Studd, and the singing of the hymn, "Now Are We the Sons of God," concluded the preliminary portion of the proceedings.

Mr. Moody took for his text 3rd verse, 3rd chapter of St. John, "Except a man be born again he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God." He impressed on the minds of his hearers the necessity of imprinting the words of the text on their minds, because they were the words of the Lord Jesus Christ himself. He met a man in Victoria who had listened to one of his sermons in the old country, who told him he forgot everything but the text, which always came up in that man's mind when gambling, drinking and engaged in other vices. It always came to his thoughts when getting up or lying down. Forget everything else I say, but always keep the text in your minds. I would rather have "Thus saith the Lord" than a ton of man's sermons. Were everyone asked to stand up who believed in the Lord Jesus Christ, everyone present would rise, and yet most of them doubt the truth. Jesus said the words of the text to Nicodemus, and not to the woman of Samaria. Nicodemus was a Pharisee of the Pharisees, an educated man, one above reproach. Were he living to-day he would probably be a celebrated divine, and with D. D. after his name, or professor at one of the colleges. He was what the world would call a good man. Nicodemus was annoyed because the Lord has thus spoken to him and asked the question "how can a man be born again." We cannot be born again in the flesh; it is in the spirit. We are constantly wanting to patch up the old Adam. When I was born of my parents, I got my fleshy nature; when born of God I got my spiritual nature. That was the greatest blessing I ever received. Were I to have the preference to die here on this platform, or have my youth of thirty years ago restored to me before I was born again in the spirit, I would a thousand times prefer to die now. Many have a text that upsets man's ideas in regards God, and the Bible is the idea of a new birth. It is the A of God's alphabet. People have false ideas of what christianity is; some think because they say their prayers and go to church that they are christians. I ask a man if he is a Christian; he says "yes, I go to church every Sunday." Well, so does the devil. He is here now; you won't find him in the brothels and saloons down town. You will find him busiest here. Satan is the most regular attendant at church and prayer meeting. Saying prayers is one thing and praying is another. I always said my prayers before I was born again of the spirit. My mother learned them to me. I repeated it regularly every night, "Now I lay me down, etc.," but that was not praying. I would pray and after doing so would curse if any one vexed me. Many have been kept out of the kingdom of God just by saying prayers. Judas betrayed his Lord with the sacramental wine upon his lips. He was a member of the church. Being a member of a church, confirmed and baptised, does not make us Christians. Were baptism to make you all born again, I'd give up preaching. I'd baptise every sinner while he was asleep if I could not get at them any way else. A man cannot serve God unless he is born again. There is no use of you're coming to these meetings to have your feelings worked up, and then go away with a bundle of good resolutions. I used to make resolutions, aye, and write some of them with my blood. Were the resolutions of every one here written out on paper it would take half a dozen teams to haul them. It is no use patching up the old life; it is a new life we need. A friend down east let a contract to build a brown stone house. He went to Europe, and when he came back the house was finished, very nicely. The contractor was paid his price; winter came on; the frost acted as a lever and in the spring all that was supposed to be brown stone on the side of the house peeled off. It was only plaster neatly put on to resemble stone. Well, my friend had it patched up. Next winter the same thing occurred; it all peeled off. It was patched up again—till at last my friend found out that patching up was no use and he pulled the wall down and re built it up of real brown stone. It is useless to strive to patch up the old Adam in our natures. it is not reform that is wanting; it is regeneration by the Holy Ghost. Man's heart is a fountain of wickedness. It is useless to strive to make the stream pure when the fountain is impure. Christ into the heart and the moment he enters it will have a new life, a new creation. Spiritual birth is a great mystery. Some say they won't believe it, won't believe in anything they can't see, and yet they can't see the wind. They believe that there is such a thing as the wind because they see the effect if it blows their hats off. No man ever saw the effects of the wind more plainly than some of us here have seen the effects of the power of God's spirit. You can have no greater blessing than God's nature. It will give you power to control your appetite, to control your lust, to control your nature. "Moses lifted up the brazen serpent in the wilderness; so must the Son of Man be lifted up that whosoever believeth in Him shall live and have everlasting life." If you look you can be saved this very moment. If you die in sin it is your own fault; if you are condemned it is your own fault. The Israelites in the wilderness, bitten by the firey serpents, looked upon the brazen serpent and lived. So it is with sinners. The preacher related an incident of the civil war in America, where he was employed as assistant chaplain. A wounded soldier, who was dying, sent for him; he had not many hours to live. He was asked what could be done for his salvation. This soldier's mother had impressed upon him the necessity of becoming a Christian before going to the war. He neglected the advice of his loving mother, and now at the last moment wanted to know the way to the Saviour. The story of Nicodemus was read and re-read to him till he realized the means offered to him and died repeating the text. Salvation is as free as air, yet it cost God the richest jewel in heaven. I am not preaching fiction, I am preaching the grandest truth under heaven. To be born of God, born of the Spirit, to be born again."

The address was listened to with great attention and had evident effect on the listeners. When requested, some nine desirous of obtaining Salvation, stood up. The Christians being requested to stand up, nearly the whole concourse of people responded to the call. The ministers then went through the people exhorting those desirous of seeking the truth to interview Mr. Moody. The interesting meeting was brought to a close by the singing of the hymn, "Alas, and Did My Saviour Bleed."

A large number attended the Christian meeting held in the Pandora Street Methodist Church at 3 o'clock this afternoon, when Mr. Moody addressed them on the subject: "Heaven; what we know about it." The usual services will be held this evening at the rink at 8 o'clock.

OUR TOWN MAJOR.

Meeting at the Rink—Prince of Darkness.

Notwithstanding the down pour of rain The Major and a great many other sinners went to hear Mr. Moody at the rink last evening. The crowd was not so large as usual, there being about 1500 present. The services, singing and sermon were as lively and as interesting as ever. The good man told us the "story of old," that if we are to be saved we must be born again. The Major fears that he, and a great many others, will have to be born a good many times.

As the Major was groping his way home, pondering on the words of hope he had been listening to, a dim blue light surrounded him, while a strong smell of brimstone pervaded the atmosphere. Looking at his side he beheld the Prince of Darkness. "Hello, old chap," said the fiend, "I've often told you that I go to church and all this sort of thing," pointing over his shoulder. "Moody told you so, eh? Well now you'll believe it because he told you. You need not look at me so; the coming of this man to my city has made me hump round a bit, and I look troubled and weary. You needn't laugh; just you wait till he's gone and I'll show you a trick or two. You, you old sinner, I suppose will be up on the platform before long; even some of my best friends are edging that way. My spirits are asleep; they too may take a notion and join; some of them are near it. This all comes of my being too confident and indifferent to my own interests. But I hold still a trump card up my sleeve."

Your city council may tinker at morality, but my kind are too strong for them of the moralist sort. We edge them on a little, and then pull them up short. My press, you say—well, what they are doing is only a blind; read the letters my editor-in-chief writes to himself and the leading artiale of the other day. I lent them a few of my moral tunes to carry on the dodge for a while. You just wait till we have our Professor out, and we'll make things hum. A thousand of your Moodys would make no alteration in one of them at least.

The Major went home and lit his pipe and [illegible] was one of the devil's agents pondered and thought of what the "old boy" said, and the great doctrine of being born again. It were well indeed were we one and all subjected to that mysterious change, so thinks.
